

SASP2016

POSTGRADUATE WORKSHOP

8:30am – Welcome tea & coffee on arrival

9:00am Workshop Session 1 – Taking your research to the world

Prof Karen Hussey
UQ Global Change Institute

Prof Alex Haslam
UQ School of Psychology

Dr Kim Peters
UQ School of Psychology

During the PhD we strive for publications, but increasingly there are other great ways to demonstrate 'impact' and make a difference with your research. This panel of experts is ready to chat with us about bringing social psychological research to the world beyond academia. What are the pros and cons? How can early career researchers make the most of it when dealing with industry, government, or media? And what is behind the curtain in terms of careers in these industries for social psych PhDs?

This session aims to get people thinking about making connections with government, business, NGOs and other research consumers, and applying your research and skills in domains beyond academia.

10:00am – Morning Tea

10:30am Workshop Session 2 – PhD insider tips

Sean Murphy, Lydia Hayward, Zan Saeri & Zoe Walter
UQ School of Psychology

A mini-session from early career researchers with useful info for postgrads at all stages of candidature. The panel will briefly cover the spectrum of 'new' statistics and methods, including where the best sources of information on these methods are.

The number of methods we can use to collect and analyse psychological data has exploded over the last decade. For graduate students, this means that your advisor(s) may not always be familiar with the best technique to analyse your data. We'll focus on the most effective strategies to use available information to bootstrap your statistical knowledge when you don't have a teacher, as well as dealing with how to sell new techniques to your advisors, and how to proceed when there's no-one around who can check your work. At the end of the session, we'll expand our scope to discuss how to grapple with the open science movement as graduate students, including preregistration, open data, and the '21-word solution'.

11:00am Workshop Session 2 – The next big ideas in social psychology

Prof Alice Eagly
Northwestern University

Prof Matthew Hornsey
UQ School of Psychology

Dr Brock Bastian
The University of Melbourne

A/Prof Winnifred Louis
UQ School of Psychology

There's never been a more exciting time to be a social psychologist! Psychology is undergoing some transformational shifts in theory and methodology; with social psychology front and centre as a target, and a source of change. Given this, what might the future hold for ideas in social psychology? This very special expert panel will provide their perspective on the next big ideas, with lots of scope for discussion and questions.

This session aims to get everyone talking about the possibilities for social psychology in the 21st century.

SASP2016 POSTGRADUATE WORKSHOP

Featured Speakers

Prof Karen Hussey
UQ Global Change Institute

Dr Kim Peters
UQ School of Psychology

Prof Alex Haslam
UQ School of Psychology

Sean Murphy
University of Melbourne

Lydia Hayward
UQ School of Psychology

Zoe Walter
UQ School of Psychology

Dr Zan Saeri
UQ School of Psychology

Prof Alice Eagly
Northwestern University

Prof Matthew Hornsey
UQ School of Psychology

Dr Brock Bastian
University of Melbourne

A/Prof Winnifred Louis
UQ School of Psychology
